“ Glenda, it's always been “Jack and Glenda” - never just one or the other. It's going to be so hard to think of you without your beloved Jackson. The only comfort we can have is knowing he is with Jesus and without any more health problems and that you'll see him again some day. It is so hard for me to write this as my tears are flowing now. ”

I will never forget him trying to get our car started - in the pouring rain - one Sunday after church but we know that was just the kind of guy he was and he will forever be in our hearts.

You have my love and heartfelt sympathy.

“ Glenda, my friend, I am so sorry for the loss of your soulmate Jack. At times like these sometimes we do not understand the why and we question God (like I did and sometimes do now over the last 14 years). And that's okay. It is part of the grieving process. But, God truly loves you and so do I. Praying for God to comfort you and give you peace.
