“Patrick was a soft spoken little boy. When he was little I would say “Patrick speak louder so people can hear you.” As an adult Patrick was still a soft spoken man. That trait became a great asset and strength.

It has been a long week for Patrick’s entire family. As I sit here alone tonight reflecting I can hear his soft voice in my head and it comforts me. I will miss his phone calls. When I answered and I heard him say “Hey Brenda it’s Patrick”

I knew I better find a quiet spot to hear him clearly.

His voice may have been soft but it captured your attention.

I watched Patrick many times speak to his boys. He would squat down so he could be eye to eye with Josiah and Isaac. He spoke slowly and quietly, he had their undivided attention. Patrick made parenting look easy.

Rest in peace sweet Patrick.

“ Heather and I thought since we were best friends our boys would certainly be best friends as well! From infants to young adolescents Patrick and Colton were OUR boys! They had to endure weekend trips to the mall while being pushed around in a twin stroller. We hauled them around so much the wheels broke off and we had to abandon the stroller on the escalator once. We would take them on vacations and make them take pictures dressed in Wild West attire. All the while taking an oath to raise them together. Which is exactly what we did. From birthday parties and ball games to trick or treating and learning to ride dirt bikes. Two young girls just wingin it the best we could!! Patrick was a sweet, quiet and affectionate boy. His smile was infectious. That personality followed him into adulthood. He had a charismatic charm about him that just made you feel good every time you saw him. He didn't care where it was or who was around he would give you a hug and tell you how happy he was to see you! Patrick was loved beyond measure and will be missed. This isn't goodbye my sweet boy but see you later.
